

Prototypes/ideas

Source: Apple Store

I will be using this type of image layout in my website, as I like how the images of the products are placed

Source: EE Mobile Phones

I will be using this idea in my website, due to making other websites that have phones be accessible in my website, allowing the customer to travel to other websites for other and different phones

Samsung
Galaxy S24 5G

Samsung
Galaxy S24 Ultra 5G

I will be using this concept in my website, mainly because I like the layout of the phones and how their biography is portrayed, like the price, data usage, upfront cost and even a hotspot to see more details

Alternative solutions for this page

- no video to be portrayed
- no fading in images
- more hyperlinks to other websites

The reason this design was rejected is because the moving images, lack of videos and hyperlinks wouldn't make the homepage appear appealing to the user

Alternative solutions for this page

- more phones
- more hyperlinks
- a bigger table

The reason this design was rejected is because there would be far too much information on the page, the hyperlinks would take up too much space, as this website doesn't need to be fancy

Links: (internally to other pages, bookmarks, external websites, email)

index.htm, phone.htm, accessories.htm, services.htm, promotions.htm, reviews.htm, forum.htm, contact.htm

Alternative solutions for this page

- more phone names
- more opinions
- pictures of the phone

The reason this design was rejected is because too many phones and opinions would just make the page a mess, moreover images would distract the user from the replies

Alternative solutions for this page
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>● multiple links to any forum included</li> <li>● less info</li> <li>● images</li> </ul> The reason this design was rejected is because less information was included it wouldn't suffice the purpose of the website, not to mention that multiple links and images would confuse the user about a specific forum used by the website

Alternative solutions for this page

- No map should be included
- more information
- images

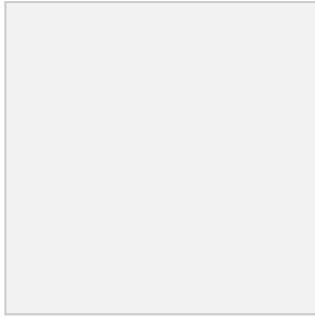

The reason this design was rejected is because if the map was not included it would limit accessibility within the website, not to mention that a contact page cant have too much information or images, as it would concise the user form the primary use of the page

Final Design

This website should portray everything needed to promote phones, accessories and their services. The designs I have conjured will meet the users requirements and fulfil its purpose, by including a multitude of interactive features, images, aesthetics, forums and forms, these will justify why the website will reach its destiny in promotion. Each of the eight individual pages will each have a purpose that will reach the requirements, one containing a form, one containing lots of promotional material, one containing interactive features to get people interested with phones, accessories and services. However, some designs were rejected from the final product, due to them being too crowded with information and images, or because they lacked the necessary features it needed to meet the user requirements, these were either removed or improved to make the website reach its full potential. In the end, with all the information, interactivity and features I have included within the final design, the website should fulfil its purpose; promoting mobile phones, accessories and services.

The constraints that I have with this however, is that I am too inexperienced with HTML, only having a few months to learn and digest, therefore, I don't really understand most coding, only a majority of the basics like paragraphs, headings, subtitles, CSS etc, which limits the website a little. The second and last constraint that I have, is that I'm sceptical about my skills developing the website and having an impact on it. While I believe this, I hope my final product will meet the desired requirement.
